But wouldn't the democratic ticket—Payne and Flower—take like wild-fire among certain democrats? Monopoly at both ends of the ticket would be thoroughly democratic.

The bar of Chicago is unanimous for Judge Blodgett as successor to Judge Drummond on the seventh circuit bench; The bar of Wisconsin will be unanimous for Judge Dyer for the same position.

Lucy Stowe doesn't want the Bartholdi statue set up until women have their rights. Lucy may get her wish. It now looks as if woman's rights and the setting up of the Bartholdi statue are a long way off.

The journals of the Ohio legislature have revealed the Scott liquor law.—Janesville Gazette.

This is an intelligent statement to make. Of course, nothing of the kind has been done.—Madison Democrat.

The statement was intelligent enough to be made. The house passed the bill repealing the law, otherwise the telegraph erred in its report.

There is a man in New York city under sentence of death for murder. We call attention of Chicago courts to this singular fact, and ask, are you going to allow Chicago scooped in this reckless manner? Are the Newsboys to yell every day in the year, "All about the murder"? "Full particulars of the double murder on the West Side" and yet no hanging? Inter Ocean.

There is not much chance that a man will be hanged in Chicago for so slight an offense as murder. Murder is one of the many enterprises of that great city, and to hang would be simply ridiculous.

However much the north may deplore the Mississippi political plan, that state is entitled to some honor from a moral point of view. The senate of that state has passed a bill to provide for the formal trial of habitual drunkards, and for the appointment of guardians for them, and for confining them in the lunatic asylum at the discretion of the court. This means that imbecile drunkards shall not be allowed to squander their property and reduce their families to want, nor abuse them; that their property shall be placed in the trust of guardians, and that when they are so incompetent that they can not help but get drunk, they shall be legally restrained.

In December 1879, Ira W. Baker took a load of hay to Madison, from which he was thrown through the means of a defective gutter in the city. From the accident he sustained some severe personal injuries. Recently he recovered judgment in the circuit court of Jefferson county against the city of Madison for the sum of $6,000. The journal says this is the third time this case has been tried; the first time in Dane county, when the verdict was $3,000; the second in Jefferson county, verdict $2,500. The first verdict was set aside by Judge Stewart, of the Dane county circuit, the second verdict by the supreme court, and now it remains to be seen what will be done with the third verdict, which is generally thought to be quite excessive.

There is something terrible about the floods in the Ohio at Cincinnati. They were never higher in the history of the city than they were on Thursday, except three times—1832, 1847, and 1880, and now the water is nearly to the mark of high water of last year. When the city was delivered over to total darkness one year ago this month and timorous citizens feared that crime and discord would reign during the exciting days of the mighty flood, it is said the city was never more quiet and orderly than at that time. Usually, there is something about dreadful disasters, which come upon a city suddenly, like the destructive floods at Cincinnati, which excites the criminal instinct in man. It also tells us in this fact, that at the time of appalling danger, the criminal is a coward.

The editor of the Janesville Gazette has made a bad mistake. He prints this editorially, Mr. Pratt was the Democratic candidate for governor against Governor Rusk, and the Janesville Gazette, when in its right mind, abused him like a pocket. It now says of him: "Those directly in the state fair will applaud the position of Mr. Pratt, president of the society, regarding gambling on the state fair grounds. He is sternly opposed to permitting gambling devices or any form of monte-bank on the grounds in the future. It will afford the people a good deal of satisfaction to know that heretofore visitors to the state fair will not be confronted by scores of blacklegs who go there to make money by cheating and gambling."—Madison Democrat.

The editor of the Madison Democrat makes a bad mistake in saying that the editor of the Gazette "abused Mr. Pratt like a pickpocket" during the last gubernatorial canvass. The Gazette had nothing but the kindest words for Mr. Pratt during that campaign. Anything said in the way of personal abuse against him would be a baseless outrage, for no man in the state, the Gazette cares not to what party he may belong, is more entitled to the good opinion of all men for his manly character, than Mr. Pratt. The Democrat should not be so hasty and reckless in making so serious a charge as that.

Just how the democratic party in congress are going to effect tariff reform, is one of the many things that can't be explained. There is a regular confusion of tongues on the question. For instance, the Morrison tariff-reform bill, which is about as fair as a democratic measure of that kind as could be expected, is kicking up a political dust in the democratic camp. The Milwaukee Sentinel puts the fittering among the democrats on account of the bill on these grounds:

"By putting you on the free list it has alarmed the Virginia democrats."

"By largely reducing the tariff on wool it has alarmed the democratic wool-growers of Ohio. Mr. Conover says that it has destroyed every chance of democratic success in that state."

"By reducing the tariff on sugar and rice it has alarmed the democratic rice and sugar growers of the south."

"The salt interest is alarmed."

"The glass and pottery men and the manufacturers of cotton and woolen goods are against it."

This shows that there is not a possibility of any free trade bill passing the house at this session. It's largely democratic, but there are so many interests influenced by the tariff that it will be one of the impossibilities to drive a bill through the house that will sweep protection from all the chief industries of the country.

The accidental congressman who is making a desperate strife for notoriety, is Mr. Sumner, of Waukesha. His ambition is only equaled by his egotism. He has finally got himself into the illustrated gallery, "The men of the hour," and concerning Mr. Sumner and his picture, the Chicago Herald continues the following:

"Until a few weeks ago D. H. Sumner, of Waukesha, was known to fame only as the accidental successor in congress of Gen. E. S. Bragg. Gen. Bragg served his country with distinction as commander of the Iron brigade, and was for several terms one of the leaders of the democratic party of the house, but he neglected to look out for his fences, and to get out of a tangle, the nominating convention in his district took up a new man, the aforesaid Sumner. Gen. Bragg retired to private life, and Sumner came to the front as a congressman. During all of his long career Gen. Bragg's features were unknown to the public. He never appeared in wood-cut or engraving. Whether he was gray and grizzled or bald and bony was never known except by his friends. The "men of the hour" pictures had not appeared in any paper. He differed with Sumner. He stepped into the house of representatives fresh as a daisy from the lake-gemmed county of Waukesha, introduced a preposterous bill to establish postal telegraph, and in less than a week every semi-illustrated newspaper of the country was supplied with a "cut" of the distinguished author of the postal telegraph bill." Mr. Sumner's ugly countenance and uglier bill are now making the grand rounds of the patent inside press, and his fame is established. Poor Bragg never knew such glory. He never introduced a oracle bill. He should have given Sumner a chance long before he died.

Waukesha is getting up in the world. It has been the home of Randall and Barstow, and has gained some additional honor by being the home of the young man who is one of the "great men of the hour" and who beat General Bragg. The "Little General" didn't think he should run for congress next fall, but if Sumner's pictures are thoroughly distributed through the Fourth district, it will pay the general to make an effort for the nomination. No such a looking "statesman" as the portrait represents Sumner to be, can win in much a contest.

The case of Billy McGlory is another instance which strikes the sober mind, that such can serve no substantial purpose in the conversion of noted criminals. There have been many miraculous conversions since St. Paul was struck to the ground while on his way to Damascus, but very few of them have gone down in history as thoroughly good and as a lasting blessing. Billy McGlory is one of the roughs of New York. He did everything that was mean. He not only kept a low dance house, a brothel, a vile grog-shop, but he managed a "robber's-roost." He is a worse character than Harry Hill because he has less conscience. He became so wicked and such a daring out-law that he was arrested and taken to prison. When he got behind the bars, he was visited by one Gibbs, an evangelist, who made a strong endeavor to convert McGlory. He so succeeded as to have the assurance from the criminal that he wanted to lead a better life, and appeared to be touched to the soul, for things resembling tears seemed to glisten in his eyes. Mr. Gibbs concluded the marvelous work had been done, and at once proclaimed the news from the house-top. The miraculous conversion of McGlory he counted as one of the greatest of the time, and his gush knew no limit. But when he undertook to get Billy McGlory out of jail for the purpose of making an evangelist out of him, he found he had been too hasty and had done the cause of religion an injustice. The Judge had no faith in McGlory's conversion, because he knew him too well. He sent him to the penitentiary for a few months, but before the criminal left the court room, and Mr. Gibbs was giving him consolation, McGlory, with an eye full of misery and a face hardened by sin, said to the evangelist, "do you know what you can do to the devil? Gibbs, you can go right to the devil." The conduct of Mr. Gibbs proved that grace of his kind not only does not convert, but that it makes mockery of one of the most sacred institutions given to mankind.

The great publishing house of Cassell & Company, New York, have published Dante's Inferno as translated by the Rev. H. F. Cary. This is one of the most popular of that remarkable poem, and because it contains critical and explanatory notes, with a life of Dante. But one of the greatest attractions of this valuable work, are the seventy-six full page illustrations by Gustave Doré. They contain a marvelously due and striking interpretation of the text. They are masterpieces from the pencil of that remarkable artist, not being surpassed in ability and genius by any other work he ever illustrated. The book is in a large quarto form, the text handsomely printed on heavy paper, and the binding is a credit to the firm. It is one of the most valuable and sumptuous illustrated books to be found in the market. The price in cloth is only $15. Messrs. Cassell & Co., stand foremost in the line of art publishers. Their works are enduring monuments to art.

THE COMING MAN.

Speculation in Washington as to Various Booms.

Logan and Arthur—The Democratic Favorite—Congressional Summary—Eaton on Wendell Phillips—Capital Items.

Washington City, Feb. 9.—During the last few days a considerable number of leading politicians from various portions of the country have congregated in Washington, manifestly to organize movements in support of certain presidential candidates. The distinctness of these parties in organizing their campaign is a matter of general remark, and there is an apparent disposition to hurry up things from now on. During the present week several prominent Pennsylvania Republicans have been over here in consultation with Mr. Blaine, and are to be seen in the office of Mr. Tilden, and there is an apparent disposition to bring up the name of Blaine as a candidate for the nomination. The Pennsylvania delegation is a candidate for the presidency, and the delegation must be selected by each congressional district. These delegates will be elected early in March and will be a lively fight for the Pennsylvania delegation.

Arthur's friends are active here and so are Logan's. Concerning the latter The Evening Star of this city has this to say: "A prominent Pennsylvania politician said to a reporter that a quiet movement is on foot in that state to elect delegates to the National convention who will pledge to Mr. Logan. Under this plan the delegation will be selected by each congressional district, the delegates to be elected early in March and will be a lively fight for the Pennsylvania delegation."

There is a great deal of speculation as to the new York delegation. A number of New York friends of Arthur's word here on last Tuesday and made a long call at the White House. There is no doubt that they are internalists. Mr. Arthur, that he will be nominated. Frank Hatton and George Gorham, however, are confident that Arthur will fairly divide the Pennsylvania delegation with alt opponents.

nothing occurring to mar the pleasures of the evening in the least. All who were present were extremely pleased of such an opportunity to enjoy the evening.

We owe our friend Ingerson, of the Beloit Free Press, and postoffice, an apology. Under date of January 20, 1884, we find on our table an unanswered letter, which reads: "Enclosed find $1.50 for a year's subscription to the Weekly Gazette, which please send to Mr. —. You owe me five cents; two for postage and three for postal note, to say nothing about time, good will, &c." The letter should have been answered at once, but escaped our notice. We have been busy during the past two weeks in trying to make a little money on a scheme suggested by a friend, whose advice we have always found valuable. He suggested that a good way to tide over the dull season, in the newspaper business, was to go through the list of successful political aspirants, and charge them for services rendered. We find on the new set of books opened for this purpose, against Mr. Ingerson's name, a charge of $100, and are pleased to relieve the monotony of the other side of the account by placing to his credit the nickel referred to and twenty-four cents for good will, leaving a balance of $99.71. A few more nickels and a liberal installment of good will, will materially reduce the account.

Let us hear from you often.
